

Why Group Piano?

Your child will thrive in group classes:

Starting your child's piano learning in a group will give them opportunities to develop a wide range of foundational skills and will ignite their love of playing.

Musical Interactions

Making music together is the most impactful way for students to engage with piano learning. Our repertoire is designed to be interactive and students develop their performance skills.

Collaborative Learners

When students learn together, and have a common aim, they work as a team, and every individual is motivated and invested. Games, songs and creative tasks are achieved by working together.

Creative Opportunities

In our groups, we can incorporate creative learning opportunities such as improvisation and composition. Our topics inspire and give relevance to piano playing and musical elements.

Variety of Activities

Our lesson structures include the pace and variety that is suited to our learners. From moving to music with scarves and bubbles, to singing and drawing to music, we use all sorts of activities to embed learning and reach different learner styles.

Secure Foundations

With our ability to consolidate and review, while deepening the application of skills and concepts, our cyclical approach is the ideal learning structure for students. The careful building blocks and scaffolding of concepts, ensure our students have secure foundations.

Fun!

Our students have fun! They love their classes and this enjoyment enables them to access and apply their learning more successfully.
