Through the Mud

While the addition of a mudroom is hardly a new concept, it's become somewhat of a nonnegotiable in modern homes. "In our new construction projects, they have become the number one request; so much so that builders now treat it as a standard feature," notes Chip Gruver, president of Virginia-based home build firm Gruver Cooley. Here, designer Jennifer Hunter outfitted the mudroom of her Connecticut Colonial Revival home with functional yet stylish cabinetry, color-drenched in Farrow & Ball's Brinjal for a dramatic dose of contrast.

TONAL TREILLAGE

Emily Tucker didn't skimp when it came to color and pattern in this saturated space, which is still durable enough to handle daily wear and tear. Trellis-inspired detailing climbs the cabinetry, while Scalamandré star-dotted grasscloth lines the walls.

COBBLED TOGETHER

To create a realistic, “kick-off-your-boots kind of a room,” Allison Willson opted to cover the mudroom floor with well-worn antique cobblestones from the storied streets of Europe.

ETCHED IN TIME

Not wanting to disrupt the timeworn charm of a 1940s coastal home, the Celui Design duo embraced patina by adding mahogany paneling on the ceiling and sizable storage around the preexisting window.
