

IF THE CROWN FITS

Krista Andersen

Age 47 • Orem

Krista has taken almost 30K Instagram followers on her journey fighting breast cancer by dressing up in a new costume for every treatment. From superheroes to boxing, Krista brings laughter and surprise to somber settings. By trade, she is a master mediator in high conflict, health care and domestic disputes. She is working on her doctorate in interdisciplinary leadership. Her dissertation topic? "How self-care can improve work-life satisfaction for women." Krista has worn the "parent costume" in the lives of 12 children. Her Instagram account name reminds us there are @twosidestothestory.

Game of Clue I've changed careers several times because I wasn't fulfilled. I've left a marriage because it wasn't healthy. The path of 17-year-old me is nothing like the path of 47-year-old me. Sometimes you have to get hysterical to get historical. Cancer taught me having purpose equals having hope.

Uno Reverse Through my mother's death when I was a teenager, I learned time is finite in this earth-space and that memories last far longer than gifts. Divorce taught me conflict is persistent in life and we can choose how we engage. Cancer taught me that when faced with a hard choice, I can do anything. Cancer is a community full of gifts if we seek to see them.

Full Hand I have a lot of Starburst, yoga pants, and costumes. I wore a different costume to 16 chemotherapy treatments, 28 radiation treatments, and unknown numbers of doctor appts. I have bins full of costumes and would love for other cancer warriors to use them.

Life Hack The acronym WAIT (Why Am I Talking). I use it to be a better listener and to engage in conflict in a more healthy way.

Ticket to Ride In the future, I see myself involved in legislation for the regulation and legalization of plant medicines to treat disease, mental health, and PTSD. I see myself educating others on how words can be used to heal and harm, and the difference between the two.

Greg Wrubell

Age 54 • Cedar Hills

As BYU's "Voice of the Cougars," Greg has been announcing play-by-plays for the university's sports teams since 1996. Greg began his journey in radio when he stepped into the role of an unpaid, night-shift intern at KSL. That gig led to being the most famous voice for BYU. When not on the sidelines of a basketball, football or women's soccer game, Greg can be found in the classroom teaching aspiring BYU sports media students or with his wife, Tauna, four kids and four grandkids. Regardless of his whereabouts, you can always count on Greg to be sporting BYU-logged attire.

Game of Life From August to May, my days are all about game prep and show prep. Lots of research, tweeting, memorizing, video scouting, spotting-board creation and writing. In the offseason, there's family travel, reading and prepping for the sports seasons ahead.

Draw Four It has been a challenge to balance my unusual work schedule with family responsibilities and wishes, but thanks to an understanding wife and wonderful kids, we make it work and lean into the fun and enjoyable aspects of life in the sports media world.

Twister A lot of folks think I fly on the football and basketball team charters to and from games, but I don't. You'll always find me on the same flights as the fans.

Monopoly on Humor My grandkids and Jim Gaffigan make me laugh.

Hungry Hippos My favorite local place is Gurus for Marco Polo Pasta or Cilantro-Lime Quesadilla.

Catchphrase "Good gravy."

Life Hack A reserved parking spot at the Marriott Center and Delta Sky Club membership.

Ticket to Ride I plan to be calling games for BYU as the Cougars contend for championships in the Big 12. I am grateful to have a job doing what I love at a very special place, bringing the joy of BYU sports to the best fans in the country.

Rachelle Rutherford

Age 46 • Lindon

Rachelle is the CEO of Kids on the Move, owner of Elevated 1031, and was crowned Mrs. Utah United States in 2016. She's also the mother of six and has three degrees. (She took a limo to the airport immediately following her MBA graduation to celebrate at Disneyland.) But Rachelle's life didn't start with crowns and C-suites. She woke up in the hospital at 17 after a suicide attempt and decided to partner with God on creating her life — which she knew had to include education. She raised her children while working full-time and attending night school for 11 years. "On the move" has been her lifetime mantra.

Game of Life My mornings consist of meditation and exercise before sending 5 children out the door to school. I spend the rest of my day as CEO of Kids On The Move supporting 212 employees with services that support 2,700 young children with special needs and their families. In the evening, I spend time coaching a freshman girls basketball team at American Heritage School.

Roll the Dice My life began the day I married my best friend, Scott. He has survived two cancer diagnoses.

Twister Some people don't understand why I competed for Mrs. Utah America when I had already been Mrs. Utah United States. The Mrs. Utah America, Mrs. America and Mrs. World provide a title and platform that give women a voice. I am passionate about defending innocence of children. My message just happens to be delivered with a business suit, swimsuit and evening gown. If that gets the message across, so be it.

Catchphrase My children would say my common phrase is, "I am on my way." (Laughing)

Full Deck I have an above average amount of evening gowns. I wish there were more parties to wear them to!

Ticket to Ride I plan to expand services at Kids on the Move and write an autobiography that instills a message of hope, healing and happiness.
