What is a cleansing oil?

Cleansing oils are so much more than your typical cooking oil. Formulated specifically for use on the face, cleansing oils are both hydrating and soothing – making them perfect for those with sensitive skin types and dehydrated skin. Unlike traditional cleansers that rely on detergents to break down oil, cleansing oils draw out the oil, make-up and impurities that congest pores with a “like attracts like” approach. Cleansing oils typically contain botanical oils such as sesame, almond, and grape seed that emulsify with water to rinse away cleanly.

What's the big deal about charcoal anyway?

By definition, activated charcoal is charcoal (the byproduct of carbon-containing material like wood, coconut shells, or peat) that has been treated to so it's more porous than regular charcoal. Because of its negative electric charge and porous nature, activated charcoal can attract and trap toxins in our bodies before they're absorbed. In fact, charcoal has been used as an Ayurvedic treatment for gut issues like poisoning for centuries. Using charcoal for the skin is based on the idea that if it can remove toxins from your GI tract, it can do the same for your complexion. It acts as a magnet for oils, dead skin cells, and debris from environmental exposure.

RIKKI'S ROCK STARS: VITAMIN C

Free radicals are anti-oxygen bombs that trigger inflammation and cascades of damage. These highly unstable molecules are missing an electron and, in an attempt to stabilize, steal electrons from otherwise healthy cells. How can free radicals be stopped? Neutralize the "bomb" – so to speak. Antioxidants donate an electron to free radicals before they can cause undue damage to the skin. Vitamin C is one such antioxidant that can neutralize and remove free radicals, thereby minimizing the visible impact of exposure to pollution, particulate matter and other types of environmental stress.

But I'm afraid to use oil on my face! It's ok!

Oils. If using them on your face still frightens you with visions of shiny foreheads and breakouts, you need to get versed on them.

When formulated for skin care, these magical liquids work super-hard to add moisture to your skin, balance oil production and provide nutrients. Because oils are lipophilic (or "fat-loving") elements, they pass through the lipid layer of the skin faster, trapping water and moisture and leading to superior hydration. Contrary to popular belief, oil is one of the best ways to tackle oily skin. If you suffer from overactive sebum production, applying oil can actually reduce oil generation. When skin is properly hydrated, overactive sebaceous glands decrease activity and promote balanced skin.
