1. What does it really mean to “seek God’s will in all you do” when life feels confusing or when His direction doesn’t make sense? How can we practice trusting God’s will over our own understanding?
2. The message mentions that a divided heart cannot fully seek God. What are some ways we can recognize when our hearts are divided, and how can we guard against letting the world’s influences harden or distract us?
3. Abraham’s obedience to God required deep trust, even when it didn’t make sense. Can you think of a time when obedience to God required you to give something up or take a difficult step of faith? What did you learn through that experience?
4. Abraham’s obedience to God required deep trust, even when it didn’t make sense. Can you think of a time when obedience to God required you to give something up or take a difficult step of faith? What did you learn through that experience?
5. Why do you think it’s so difficult for us to fully submit to God’s will instead of trying to control outcomes? What practical steps can help us move from partial submission to wholehearted surrender?
