

Jill Davis has lived many lifetimes just in this one life; military spouse, homemaker, writer, speaker coach, business owner, and now, podcast host and farm caretaker.

ABOUT

JILL DAVIS

Since she was a little girl playing on the playground, Jill has guided people to understand the power of their stories.

An entrepreneur from birth, Jill grew up immersed in the world of her family's business. It was no surprise that she would go on to run several successful businesses ventures of her own, including earning seven of the coveted Mary Kay cars. That is, of course, all while she simultaneously juggled being a military spouse and raising her four incredible kids (her greatest and most joyous accomplishment).

For Jill, though, it has always been about much more than tangible earnings and professional certifications. At the core of each of her many lives is a passion for people and their stories. This became even clearer to her during the Covid-19 Pandemic, and she set off to create a way for others to tell their stories as a way of reminding us all that we have been through impossible things and survived. Difficulties come, but the world keeps turning, and life just gets better.

These days, Jill continues to coach people in telling their stories, spends time hosting her story based podcast, and has many long chats on her little farm in Kansas, with its two resident owls named Sophia and Aristotle.
