The Washington Post—January 18, 2023—Booger McFarland Transcript on Troy Vincent Handling the Hamlin crisis

MR. McFARLAND: Well, I think the league has done a great job because, obviously, first and foremost, it was all about Damar and his health and his welfare and how he was doing, and I think for them not knowing at first whether or not he was going to be okay, they didn't make any decisions. They didn't know if the Bills were going to play or if the NFL was going to resume. It was "one day at a time."

You got to give Troy Vincent, Roger Goodell and his staff a great pat on the back for what they did, and I think as you move forward, once we found out that he was going to be okay and he started breathing on his own and then he was moved from Cincinnati to Buffalo and then he shows up at the Bills' facility, like, you're just ecstatic, man, because prayer changes things, man. I think that's the biggest thing that we all take out of it as a nation, because we all came together, and we were praying for Damar. And so for him to be okay, if and when he decides to resume his football career, that's one thing, but for right now, for him just to be okay was an absolute miracle, and we're thankful for that.
