

10 Most Forgotten Wedding Day Details

10. Stationery / ring box for detail shots

Have an extra set of all your paper products to be captured on the Big Day - everything from your save the dates and invitations to custom napkins, program, and even your welcome bag. A pretty ring box is always a great idea to have to use when capturing a few photos of your ring. Trust me, your photographer will thank you!

9. Pens for the guest book

Whether you buy a fancy pen solely for this purpose, or just grab a pack of Sharpie pens from Target, make sure your guests have something to write with if you want them to sign something.

8. Lighters

Have candles anywhere in your decor? Doing a sparkler exit? Everyone always plans for a beautiful event, but forgets the small pieces that actually make that event happen.

7. Bar decor

It doesn't need much, but your guests will definitely stop by it a few times, so you need something there to tie your theme together and make a good impression!

6. Vendor tips

Whether it's gratuities for the vendors that have done an amazing job for you, or just the remaining balance you need to pay before the start of the event, make sure that you plan for these, and don't leave family or bridesmaids to deal with bills and tips at the end of the night.

5. The cake knife/server

Don't count on your caterer having an extra knife around that you can cut your cake with! Even if you don't want a personalized keepsake, make sure you at least plan ahead and have something to get the job done.

4. The marriage license

You've done all this work to have your dream wedding, so you better make sure it's legal! Remember to give your license to the officiant, and that they have two witnesses sign it, so that you can truly begin your married life together.

3. To eat

This may not be an item like the rest of the list, but it's so important, and we've had so many brides that are too busy, excited, or nervous and completely forget to eat something on their day. Make sure you have breakfast and lunch as you normally would and keep some light snacks and plenty of water on hand while you're getting ready.

2. Cake box for your top tier

More often than not, the vendor that provided your cake will include a box for you to save your top tier of cake in. However, this is absolutely something you should confirm with them beforehand! If they're not providing it, you need to get one. Hide it under the cake table or in a back room and designate someone to pack it up at the end of the night.

1. Comfortable dancing shoes

Everyone wants to dance the night away, so be sure to have either shoe inserts or a comfortable pair to slip into as soon as the reception kicks off. That way you are comfortable and you aren't sitting on the sidelines while everyone dances.
