

Matthew Huggins is a longtime Johnstown resident, business leader, and public servant who believes strongly that service to one another is both a responsibility and a privilege. He has lived in Johnstown since 2013 and brings more than 20 years of executive leadership experience in operations, compliance, and strategic decision-making within the financial services industry.

Professionally, Matthew serves as Vice President at Federal Adjustment Bureau Inc. (FABCO), where he helps guide organizational strategy, manages teams, and ensures regulatory compliance. His background has given him a strong appreciation for fiscal responsibility, transparency, and thoughtful problem-solving skills, he brings this to his work on City Council.

Matthew believes public office is one of the most effective ways to ensure that those with little or no voice have a seat at the table and a say in how their community is governed. He is committed to listening, collaborating, and making practical decisions that support families, small businesses, and the long-term health of the community.

Matthew has been married to his wife, Ellen, for 26 years, and together they have four children—Ally, Kalea, Anna, and Ian. Outside of public service, he enjoys traveling, especially to the Chesapeake Bay area, and recently discovered a love of cruising. Above all, Matthew is guided by family, integrity, and a desire to leave his community better than he found it.
