Chris Youngblood

Chris Youngblood is a talented basketball player who recently concluded his senior season at the University of South Florida (USF). While his collegiate career is not over, his impact on the USF Bulls program is undeniable. Hailing from Tuscaloosa, Alabama, Youngblood initially played for Kennesaw State before transferring to USF for his senior year. He quickly established himself as a leader, both on the court with his scoring prowess and off the court with his strong work ethic and positive attitude.

During the 2023-24 season, Youngblood averaged a team-high 15.3 points per game, showcasing his sharp shooting ability with a 41.6% success rate from three-point range. He was also a key contributor in clutch moments, leading the Bulls to a successful season that included a regular-season championship.

Youngblood's talents were recognized beyond the USF program. He was named co-AAC Player of the Year, a testament to his all-around game. However, his contributions go beyond statistics. Articles described him as a vocal leader who led by example and a strong teammate who credited his success to the entire team. Coach Abdur-Rahim echoed this sentiment, praising Youngblood not only for his skills but also for his character.

After a stellar season, Youngblood decided to enter the NCAA transfer portal in April of 2024. This move likely reflects his desire to play closer to his Alabama roots, as he recently committed to the University of Alabama basketball program. Chris Youngblood's journey as a basketball player is far from over. His time at USF cemented his reputation as a skilled scorer, a tenacious competitor, and a true team player. Bullsfans will remember him for his leadership and his role in propelling the program to new heights.
