

NEWBORN Sessions

I am SO excited to meet your sweet little one and photograph memories that you'll cherish way beyond their high school graduation. What an honor it is for me to be such a small but important part of your life.

Here are a few tips and ideas to get you ready for the session. If you have any questions please let me know. I always want to serve you the very best way I can.

- Loose-fitting clothing with layers tends to look effortlessly beautiful, especially in light colors, which create a soft, flattering effect. For postpartum moms, a floor-length dress can be a perfect choice — it's elegant, comfortable, and helps to gently conceal areas you might not want to highlight.
- We will take most photos in whatever rooms in your home have the best light. These rooms usually have the biggest windows but this can also vary depending on the time of day. I often take most photos in the main living spaces (living room, etc), master bedroom, nursery.
- Have light muslin swaddles available for baby to be wrapped in. Outfits tend to not fit most babies very well when they are newborns so my favorite way to photograph them is swaddled in a thin swaddling blanket. (I can bring some too.)
- Props are more than welcome but not a necessity. If you have cute headbands, little hats or even the tiniest stuffed animals you'd like to include....let's try it!
- Newborn babies need time. Don't feel like a failure if we have to take breaks for feedings, cuddles or anything else that puts baby at ease. It is completely normal for newborn sessions to take a little extra time and I have plenty of patience!

- Get the whole family involved! Including big siblings, mom and dad or even a pet often produce some of my most favorite images. Let's get everyone involved and have fun!
- Please don't feel like you need your house to look perfect when I arrive. I am a mom and know that you live there. I'll move things around if needed to make your photos as perfect as possible!
- If you don't want newborn photos taken in your home, we can easily rent a studio or even take them outdoors.

...Let's dream together!
