

Prudence Home and Design

This New Canaan basement, once deemed dark and scary by the client's children, is now a destination space where the whole family can hang, thanks to Prudence Bailey of Prudence Home and Design. Spanning the full footprint of the home's first floor, her design focused on creating multiple zones for play and relaxation, ensuring a fun yet sophisticated environment that could grow with the family. A neutral yet lively color palette was chosen to ensure longevity, allowing the space to evolve as the children's interests change.

The custom playhouse is packed with charming details, with its scalloped siding, café awning and sweet flowerbox. The kids can climb the ladder and cozy up on the second floor, when they're not utilizing the nearby rock-climbing wall, monkey bars and foam pit.

One of the biggest challenges was the room's long, narrow layout, which required careful planning to ensure safe and functional seating and play areas. To add a touch of sophistication, a fireplace was installed, creating a cozy atmosphere for the adults to enjoy while they're downstairs.
